Russian Situation One of Actual Revolution, Resembling That of France.

RESULT CANNOT BE TOLD

VIEW OF A NOTED FRENCH AUTHORITY.

Paris, July 10.—Anatole Leroy-Beaulieu, director of the Institute of France and the foremost French authority on Russian affairs, whose history of Russia is recognized as being one of the most accurate presentations of the affairs of that empire, received the correspondent of the Associated Press this morning at his country seat near Versailles, where he devoted an hour to discussing the gravity of Russia's present change and the outlook for the future. M. Leroy-Beaulieu makes frequent visits to Russia, the last one only a few weeks ago, for the purpose of personally observing the results of the first Russian election. When asked to sum up his recent observations, M. Leroy-Beaulieu said:

Actual Revolution.
"It should be understood that the Russian situation is one of actual revolution. It is no crisis which can be measured by days, weeks or months, but is a vast and complete transition, resembling that of the French revolution. When I say revolution, I do not mean that the monarchy is certain to be overthrown, although it is possible that this may follow. The great part of the leaders of the constitutional democracy desire to save the throne from wreck, but they recognize that they are not masters of the future. If the government does not satisfy the nation's demands catastrophes of the gravest nature are ahead for Russia."

Autocracy Doomed.
M. Leroy-Beaulieu was asked if the preservation of the throne meant a continuation of the autocracy.

"By no means," he replied. "On the contrary, arbitrary autocracy is doomed. All that the present monarchy can save at the best is power within constitutional or well defined limits. The emperor has good intentions, but he knows very little of his own country outside of the limits of the palaces. He is always hesitating, and he is himself terrified by the example of the French revolution and does not wish to have the same end as Louis XIV, although he forgets that Charles I of England arrived at a similar end by another route. Perhaps it is already too late to save the dynasty from going down with the autocracy, but the emperor might stay the storm by permitting the formation of a ministry, representing parliament, which represents the people. He has already lost much time and the feeling of discontent is continually increasing."

Agrarian Question.
M. Leroy-Beaulieu then discussed the agrarian and other leading questions. The land, he said, was the most difficult question. The government recedes before the enormous cost of partial or total expropriation of the ancient estates, yet unless the emperor satisfies the peasants he will transform them into an opposition element and perhaps into revolutionists."

When questioned concerning the Jewish question Leroy-Beaulieu spoke of his observations during his recent travels in Russia, where he was struck with the tenacity with which the Jews demanded the same civil and political rights as Christians.

"There are 5,000,000 Jews in Russia," said he, "and if as many of them are found among the revolutionists the reason is to be found in the exceptional laws to which they are compelled to submit. The Jews thus become irreconcilable adversaries of the government, which obstinately refuses them the rights accorded to other people in the country. Thus the reactionists count on the Jews, and this is why the police incite hostilities against the Jews, like those at Bialystok. Even if the ministers are not directly responsible, the local police organize these butcheries, which proceed under the benevolent silence of the administration."

Uprisings Were Planned.
"When I visited Russia plans for uprisings against the Jews were everywhere announced and the subsequent action merely realized what I expected. The sole means of bringing about the withdrawal of the Jewish masses from the revolutionary propaganda is to accord them equality before the law. The Russian parliament demands this, but the government hesitates persisting in considering the Jews the principal organizers of the revolution."

Poils Guarded by Troops.
"The elections proceeded in a state of siege. All the election bureaus in Poland were guarded by troops and often Cossacks were stationed at the doors. I have even heard the Cossacks' whips falling on the backs of electors at Lodz, but that did not prevent the election. The Cossacks were stationed at the doors of the opposition members to parliament. It is noticeable that there are twelve Jewish members in the lower house, including those of Moscow, the Pitsburg of Russia. One of the Jewish leaders of Moscow has eloquently defended the project for a division of the lands among the peasants, showing that there are no grounds to expect that the Jews will prove a disruptive element among the constitutional democracy."

Results Uncertain.
M. Leroy-Beaulieu outlined the urgent need of reform in the bureaucracy, which he says is beyond expression an arbitrary power, and also the suppression of arbitrary arrests and the complete transformation of the personnel of the functionaries who were blindly committed to the old regime abuses."

Conclusions M. Leroy-Beaulieu said:
"It is difficult to foresee the final results of such a vast upheaval, but I expect results to come about through slow processes. The results of your American revolution were realized quickly because your people were prepared, but the people of Russia are far different. I am inclined to believe that this revolution will continue in various stages of intensity for ten and possibly twenty years, owing to the magnitude of the question involved and the dangers along the way. For the present the emperor's choice of a liberal ministry appears to be the best means of averting a revolution with the possible consequences of the overthrow of the dynasty."

SULTAN HAS NOT YET CONSENTED

Objection Raised to the Elevation of Leishman to Rank of Ambassador.

UNCLE SAM WILL INSIST

MINISTERS HAVE TOO LITTLE INFLUENCE.

Constantinople, July 10.—Fresh instructions have been sent to the Turkish minister at Washington, Chekib Bey, to renew his efforts to dissuade the authorities at Washington from carrying out the proposed elevation of the legation here to the status of an embassy.

It appears that when the Turkish government was first notified that the United States desired to effect the change, Chekib Bey was ordered to oppose the project, but replied that he was unable to shake the determination of the state department. He has now been instructed to inform the department that the proposed action requires a previous agreement between the two countries which has not been effected in the present case.

WITHIN HIS RIGHTS.

Sultan Can Refuse to Receive Leishman as Ambassador.

Washington, July 10.—The state department has not yet been advised of the existence of any opposition on the part of the Turkish government to the elevation of the American legation at Constantinople into an embassy. Of course, if the sultan declines to receive Mr. Leishman in the capacity of ambassador under the credentials he now holds, he is acting perfectly within his rights. But it is certain that such a course will not tend to the strengthening of the relations between America and Turkey, because in the view of the officials here it will amount to a distinct discrimination against the United States and in favor of the great European powers, now all represented by ambassadors at the porte. These ambassadors have, by right of their office, personal access to the sultan at any moment.

Ministers Must Wait.

The American minister and the other ministers, in fact, must do business through the porte entirely, and on the rare occasions when they gain access to the person of the sultan they are obliged to wait many weeks for the opportunity. The result is a very real obstruction and embarrassment in the transaction of business so that the state department is not likely to receive graciously any protests against the reception of Mr. Leishman's ambassadorial credentials. It is true that much of this business has related to the presentation of American claims against Turkey, but if the government of that Commercial Club Can Now Go Ahead and Complete the Boulevard.

The boulevard over which the Commercial club has spent so much time and money will be finished at once and it is confidently expected that there will be travel over it in a month from now. The city work on the bridge over City creek was finished yesterday and the Commercial club has been given notice that they can go ahead with its part of the work. The Commercial club has been compelled to stop work until this part was done. It will now resume operations as soon as men and teams can be obtained.

A comparatively small amount of work remains to be done and the committee of the Commercial club expect to be able to hand the driveway over to the city next month. The club has collected and spent $10,000 in the making of this beautiful drive and the city authorities are expected to do the rest and keep it in condition.

LEWIS GETS MAIL AGAIN.

Fraud Order No Longer Operates Against St. Louis Man.

Washington, July 10.—Postmaster General Cortelyou today suspended his order of July 6, 1905, to the postmaster of St. Louis forbidding the delivery of mail and the payment of money orders to the People's United States bank, its officers and agents and E. G. Lewis, so far as it affects E. G. Lewis personally. The postmaster general says the operations of the bank are understood to be at an end and the concern is practically out of existence.

This suspension, the postmaster general continues, was upon the clear understanding that the resumption of the use of the name of Lewis for the purpose

AMUSEMENTS

John S. Ellis, tenor of the glee club with the Hawaiian band at Saltair, yesterday sang native Hawaiian songs that have never before been heard in America. He made a complete change of programme and everything that he introduced was absolutely new to this country. He sang four numbers in all, songs that have just arrived from Honolulu. A new feature also was a series of Hawaiian duets sung by Let Lehua, the soprano, and Juli Anaha, contralto. William E. Jones, the basso, followed the example of Ellis and put on altogether new songs.

Manager J. E. Cohen yesterday made the claim that the big pavilion at Saltair is being "seasoned" by the band, just as a violin is seasoned by use. He asserted that there are fewer echoes than when the band first arrived, due to the effect of the sound vibrations upon the wood.

Casino park is playing to the largest business of the season this week. "The Tramp Detective" being by far the best production that the Jane Kelson company has presented.

"Men and Women" will be given twice at the Salt Lake theatre today.

Savings Bank Election.

The stockholders of the Desert Savings bank held their annual meeting yesterday. The only business of importance transacted was the election of the board of directors. Those elected are J. S. Hills, John R. Barnes, John C. Cutler, David Eccles, A. W. Carlson, George Romney, John R. Winder, Reed Smoot, George A. Switzerland and W. F. James. The only change was Senator George A. Switzerland taking the place of E. R. Eldridge, who has gone to Paris. The election of officers will be held later.
